

Dr. William L. Hollis is a veterinarian and owner partner in a 9-doctor, 100% swine veterinary practice in Carthage, Illinois.

Carthage Veterinary Service, Ltd. provides health, management, and production consulting to swine farms of all sizes in all regions of the United States and many locations abroad.

Areas of focus for Dr. Hollis include project development and implementation of producer networks; on-farm employee training; lean growth modeling; and development of tools for gilt scheduling and production projections.

Dr. Hollis attended the University of Illinois, College of Agriculture, receiving a bachelor's degree in Animal Science, continuing on to the College of Veterinary Medicine. Dr. Hollis also deferred college for two years to serve as a state and national officer in the National FFA organization.